Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 03 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly cloudy with occasional bright spells and some showers today.

Today:
A grey and murky start, with extensive low cloud and fog, which will slowly lift to give some bright or occasional sunny spells, especially inland. Staying murky on the coast. Some showers moving up from the south during the afternoon. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloudy with some showers moving slowly east during the evening. Cloud increasing across most parts overnight with areas of extensive low cloud, mist and fog. Some patchy drizzle at times. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Thursday:
Cloudy with patchy drizzle at first, with low cloud lifting to give limited bright spells. A band of occasional rain will move southwards during the afternoon. Drier and colder later. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
High pressure will bring fine, dry and settled conditions on Friday and into the weekend. Decent spells of sunshine by day, with widespread frosts overnight. Feeling cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.